LETTER FROM JUDGE WALLACE. He Declines to Allow His Name to be Presented for Governor.

UNION C. H., S. C.

Editor Intelligencer: I have recently seen an editorial article in the INTELLI-GENCER in which you express a preference for me for the nomination for Governor. I desire to thank you for the honor you do me, and for the terms in which your preference is expressed. Having fully considered the matter, and having reached a determinate conclusion, I feel it to be due to my friends that I should at once declare that, for reasons which it cannot interest the public to know. I cannot allow my name to be presented to the Convention for the nomination.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, W. H. WALLACE.

The municipal election in Columbia last week resulted in a complete "walk over the track" for the Democratic nominees. Columbia has set a worthy example to the other portions of South Carolina. They made good nominations and stuck to them solidly. That is the sure way to achieve success.

The card of Judge Wallace, which we publish elsewhere, conveys the unwelcome information that he cannot consent to accept the nomination for Governor in the coming canvass, and therefore leaves the contest where it stood before he was suggested. A great many of our readers will regret this, for he was undoubtedly the favorite of a large majority of them for Governor. Judge Wallace, however, occupies an important position which is more congenial to his taste and equally as advantageous to the State, and it is not unreasonable for him to prefer to retain it. Circumstances may vet arise which will necessitate his nomination in the interests of that enthusiasm and concord which is necessary to save the State.

The nomination of Gen. Grant by the Chicago Convention for a third term is not near as likely as it was a few weeks ago, although the Stalwarts and most corrupt elements of the Republican party are working for it with a tenacity that amounts to madness. He is not the choice of his own party, and, if nominated, it will be the work of a few leading politicians, effected by manipulating conventions without regard to the wishes of the masses of the party. The better element in the Republican party recognize the danger to Republican institutions of a departure from the established customs of near a century, that no President, however popular, should have more than two terms, and those in that party who favor a constitutional government are holding meetings in the North, East and West protesting against the principle of a third term, and demanding that Gen. Grant shall not receive the nomination at Chicago. It is now evident that if he enter the Presidential contest, it will be as the candidate of the corruptionists and consolidationists, and that his election will result in the subversion of free government and the establishment of a monarchy. But can he be elected? He cannot command the support of his own party, and that party was defeated in the last Presidential contest. when it was united, by a popular majority of 300,000. If Grant is the next President, he will not be so by the voice of the people, but by the power of the subscriptions. Col. Foreacre and Mr.

The communication of Colonel D. B. Dailey gives us a credit which is not due. It was not a correspondent of the INTEL-LIGENCER, but of the News and Courier, who wrote the article entitled "Two Brave Men," of which he speaks, and it was copied by us from our Charleston Vice President; W. N. Allman, Frankcontemporary. The INTELLIGENCER has | lin, N. C., Treasurer. always had a sincere desire to promote, in its limited sphere, harmony and a good understanding between all sections of our common country, and to the measure of its ability to soften and obliterate the asperities incident on both sides to the late civil war. We believe the safest and surest way of doing this is to give to the public the deeds of brave men on both sides, and mutual respect and a kindly feeling will spring up therefrom. Brave men may be mistaken in their opinions, but they are never base in their motives nor deceitful in their methods. A proper appreciation of the character of the Union and of the Confederate soldier by each other is bound to inspire respect and confidence between them, and it was in pursuance of this belief that we published the tribute to Colonel Dailey's intrepidity and courage as contained in the article referred to. When he prepares the statement of his recollection of the event referred to, the cost the Democracy these States to nom-INTELLIGENCER will be pleased to publish it also, if we can get hold of it. It is a healthy sign when the men who wore the blue and those who wore the grey can come together and discuss the events of an unfortunate war, in which they were engaged on opposite sides, without irritation and renewed anger, and the temper of their correspondence is more than creditable to Gen. Hagood and Col. Dailey. We wish such instances could

CONDEMNED TO DIE.

It is a notorious fact that although such a crime under their administration of the government by them, and they have repeatedly asserted that none would ever occur under a Democratic administration. Since we obtained the government these killings have almost entirely stopped, and the following report of a case terminated at the late Spartanburg Court, taken from the Carolina Spartan, shows that the laws are, and will be, impartially administered by our Courts:

Thomas White, a white man, several weeks ago, on the streets of Spartanburg, while intoxicated, by some strange freak, shot and killed Pct Williams, a negro, without provocation. The strange thing is that he did this without knowing Hawkins, or without any provocation to shoot him. It may never be known what was the secret spring in his mind that made im do this deed.

Friday afternoon the prisoner was brought into Court and placed in the dock. A dense crowd packed the courtroom at the time. Judge Wallace, feeling the awful solemnity of the occasion.

"Thomas, White, stand up. Have you anything to say why the sentence of death should not be pronounced on vou ?" For the first time during the whole trial the prisoner showed some agitation of mind. His voice was a little quivering, and he said: "I can only say that I am clear of the charges against me. I am not guilty of them. I am innocent In my conscience before God I don't feel that I done this deed. I don't think it right before God to put me to death for what I did not do." were about his words, uttered with not so much connection as here expressed. Judge Wallace then said about as fol-

"Unfortunately for you, Thos. White, a jury of your countrymen have declared you guilty, and it is my painful duty to declare the judgment of the law. I do not punish you, and the jury does not punish you. The jury have found, after careful investigation, that you killed Pet Hawkins. On that record the duty, painful as it is, devolves upon me to pronounce the sentence of the law. I cannot find it in my heart to add one word to the keen distress you feel. All men must die: but when you, a young man, full of life, just in the vigor of manhood. come to die a felon's death, it must penetrate you with a degree of distress which cannot be expressed in words. It must occur to you, as it must to every man, that if you had not had a pistol in your Prisoner: "I did not have a pistol;

Railroad Meeting at Franklin, N. C.

From the Western (N. C.) Reporter. Col. Foreacre and Mr. Wilmer, representatives of the Air Line Railroad, visited our community and attended a meeting, on the 29th of March, of the Directors of the Rabun Gap Short Line Railway Company. These gentlemen have agreed to aid this company in the construction of their road from the Georgia State line to the Tennessee State line. The Board passed resolutions opening books of subscription, and while there were comparatively few of our citizens present, subscriptions were made amounting to one hundred and four thousand dollars, with many pledges for future Wilmer, on behalf of themselves and eight other associates, subscribed one hundred thousand dollars. On these subscriptions an assessment of one dollar on the share was paid in, and certificates of stock issued.

A meeting of stockholders was then held, and following officers were elected: W. L. Love, Franklin, N. C., Presi-dent; Hiram W. Sibly, of New York,

After which the President appointed Mr. Skipwith Wilmer, of Baltimore, Md., Secretary.

The gentlemen who have taken hold of this line with a hearty good will, and with a full appreciation of its magnitude and value as a connecting line between the Northwest and the Southwest, have done so with a purpose to push forward its completion. They have already given an earnest of their faith by their works, and will in a short time give additional fruits of their faith in this great work on a great commercial artery, by putting an active corps of engineers to work in resurveying and relocating the line.

- The Washington Star says: "The interviews recently published in the New York Herald with the Democratic members of Congress from Virginia, Louisiann and Mississippi are generally accepted as conclusive proof that Tilden could not, as the Democratic Presidential nominee, carry the Solid South. The Congressmen from the three States named unanimously protested against the renomination of Tilden, and with but two or three exceptions they said it would nate him. In the face of such powerful Democratic opposition and of such testimony of his weakness Tilden continues to urge his fight for control of the New York Convention, ostensibly with the view of contending for the nomination at Cincinnati. In pursuing this course frequently asked and never satisfactorily answered. The most reasonable and plausible explanation of Tilden's course Rock Hill Herald: Col. C. J. Pride

LAW OFFICE OF

GENTLEMEN-Through the kindness of a reader of your paper, I am in receipt of a number thereof which contained a letter from your Washington correspondent of January 14th, entitled "Two Stories of Brave Men." Allow me to thank you for the fair and impartial manner with which you have treated the correspondence of Gen. Hagood and myself. As might be expected, viewing Gen. Hagood's command and the condition of it from my standpoint at the time I received the flag from the Ensign of one of the Confederate Regiments, I differ with the General as to what was said and done by each of us at the time I was shot. My knowledge of the facts and circumstances make my side of the case much more favorable to myself than any statement I have ever yet seen of the occurrence, yet I am very thankful to Gen. Hagood for the aid he has given me in the matter of my application for pension. It is my intention before long, and as soon as I can get relieved from some professional services now on my hands, to give Gen. Hagood a detailed account of the affair, as the same appeared to us, as well as the orders received by myself to go to that part of the line threatened by Hagood's command.

I am, very respectfully, yours, D. B. DAILEY.

A BLOODY DAY IN EDGEFIELD. Municipal Election Causes 2 Fatal Affray-Pistols and Whiskey Connected

Augusta Chronicle and Constitutionalist.

Yesterday afternoon the report reached Augusta that another bloody vendetta had occurred in Edgefield, whereby one person was even then in a dying condition, and two others dangerously wounded. From mouth to mouth the rumor sped, until the whole town was aghast at the repetition of a fatal affair of only eighteen months ago. Telegraph and newspaper offices were besieged for news from the scene of bloodshed, and perhaps of death, and the evening train of the Columbia Road was boarded by several natives of Edgefield, now residents of Augusta, anxious and apprehensive over the extent of the trouble. The first dispatch was brief, but fearfully suggestive. It was this:

"Another shooting scrape occurred here this morning, about the election of Town Council, which came off to-day. Julian Bland and Dr. W. E. Bland, A. A. Clisby and A. A. Glover were the parties engaged. Dr. Bland was shot in the abdo-"If you had not had a pistol in your pocket, and been on that fatal afternoon. men-considered mortal. A. A. Messrs. A. A. Chsby, Dr. W. D. Chsby, was put up in his place. Now, among the supporters of the regular ticket were Dr. Wallace E. Bland, a young physician of 25 or 30 years of age, and his brother, Julian Bland, much younger. On the other side were Mr. A. A. Clisby, one of the candidates for Warden, and Mr. Arthur A. Glover, his father-in-law, and a gentleman well known in the country. In the course of the morning Lawrence King, a colored man, and and one or two, if not three, of the five former State Senator from Edgefield county, came to the polls to vote. His vote was challenged by Clisby, who contended that King, residing beyond the corporate limits, could not cast his ballot in a municipal election. Dr. Bland contended that King had a right to vote, and an alteration ensued, in the course of which Clisby shot Dr. Bland in the bowels. Young Julian Bland immediately drew a pistol and shot Clisby in the body, and also shot Mr. Glover twice in the thigh. Clisby's wounds were considered dangerous, Glover's being not necessarily o. From the first, however, Dr. Bland's injury was thought to be fatal, and he lingered in agony, it being impossible to probe or extract the ball, and when ate in the evening intelligence reached Augusta that Dr. Bland was dead, the news was not unexpected. He was, as above stated, comparatively a young man -had been educated with care, finishing up his professional training in Paris a few years ago. Drs. Campbell and Ford. of Augusta, were both telegraphed for last evening, and at last accounts the surviving men were doing well. The from Kentucky (except Mr. Knott, who is absent,). Tennessee, South Carolina (except Senator Butler, who declines to speak,) Georgia, Missouri, Arkansas and West Virginia on the question of Mr. Tilden's availability as a Presidential candidate in their States and the probable result upon their States and districts of his nomination. The bulk of opinion is against Mr. Tilden, as unpopular, and, even in the overwhelmingly Democratic States, likely to depress the voters and bring on political stagnation. "ANYBODY EXCEPT TILDEN."

Senator Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, says: "In my opinion the nomination of Mr. Tilden would place South Carolina and six other Southern States in the doubtful list, with the chances of success greatly against us if the ex-President should be the Republican nominee. I regret this condition of public opinion in the South, but it is a recognized fact of which the Democrats of the North should be apprised. We propose to support the nominees of the Cincinnati Convention, but we hope that these nominees will be men who can be sure of the whole Southern vote." Senator Butler declined to express an opinion on the subject. John S. Richardson, of the First District, says: "I believe that a large majority of the Democratic party would vote for the nominee of the Convention, Tilden would jeopard, if not ruin, the present to say. The vote would be very close any way it may be calculated, and the fewer obstacles we have the more certain we shall be of getting an undisputed majority in every district and an aggregate vote in the State for the Democratic candidate which cannot be chal-

M. P. O'Connor, of the Second District, says: "The nomination of Mr. Tilden in my opinion means the defeat of the Electoral ticket in South Carolina. I have just returned from Charleston, and the opinion I express is confirmed by the visit to my home. The Democracy of our State would not think of bolting nomination, but we should be so indifferent, if the nomination of Mr. Tilden was presented for our support, that I should say the vote of the State would be less than it was for Mr. Greeley in 1872. I should hardly suppose the strength of our delegation would be affected by Mr. Tilden's nomination. Let anybody be nominated but Mr. Tilden and the vote of South Carolina will be assured for the Democracy, with victory from one end of the State to the other.' D. Wyatt Aiken, of the Third District, ina would be a strained vote. While there is no doubt but what the party would give him its support, it would do it grudgingly, as it were under protest, and go through the campaign in a heart-less manner. That is my honest conviction. You must remember we had a very hard time four years ago when all we had to carry a dead weight next fall. Rev. C. C. Petty and F. A. Clinton. As for the result in the Congressional Districts, I do not think there would be a late hour last evening, were somewhat men to danger and death, that, it seems been obtained: On Thursday, April 1st, to me, all good men ought to endeavor to the voters of Edgefield met at the Court rule and won on our local issues, but got worsted in the Presidential count .-Would it not be reasonable to suppose that with additional drawbacks this year. the chances of carrying the electoral ticket would be diminished?"

John H. Evins, of the Fourth District, says: "The nominee of the Convention will be supported, but, in my opinion, if it is Mr. Tilden, that support will be lukewarm compared with our enthusiasm for him four years ago. It would be very feeble as compared with the support we would give to Mr. Bayard or to Mr. Sevmour or any of the candidates named, except Mr. Tilden. You can judge of the necessity of giving us a strong candidate by recalling the result of the contest in 1876. We elected our Governor, yet we lost the electoral vote of the State. If that was so in 1876, what might be expected if Tilden was again nominated? Vhat assurance have we or can we give that we will not be beaten or counted out? I say the contingency is too great to run any risk. There might be a dead set made for Republican Congressmen, Districts would have a sharp, close contest to hold their Democratic strength. Our security against defeat will rest in the nomination of Seymour and Hendricks. Mr. Hendricks will, I understand, consent to run as Vice-President with Mr. Seymour." George D. Tillman, of the Fifth District, says: "I am sure South Carolina will go for the nominee, whoever he may be. To be sure it would be up-hill work with Mr. Tilden at the head of the ticket. Any other candidate would make the political campaign easier to go through with. Somehow the name of Mr. Tilden is not as strong as it was four years ago. He is something of a martyr, but not sufficiently divested of material prosperity to arouse that finer spiritual sense which responds to the sufferings and denials of those who sacrifice much in a just cause. He was cheated out of the office without doubt, but there is little hope that politics will ever do justice to the downtrodden in this country. As for our Congressional delegation that is a different matter entirely. We are struggling to preserve our civilization in South Carolina, and there is not the slightest danger of the delegation being aught but Democratic so long as we stand by our love for honesty and the Anglo-

Saxon race." telegram from Washington, dated April 10, says: The Democratic Senators met in caucus at 10.30 'o'clock this morning, p. m. The question of taking up the Spofford-Kellogg case was the subject under consideration, and the discussion continued with a good deal of animation and spirit. Bayard, Lamar, Garland Kernan and others spoke against the present consideration of the Kellogg case; while Saulsbury, Hill, Vance and Jones again insisted that it ought to be brought before the Senate for action without delay. The arguments pro and con were much the same as those of yesterday and the day before, except that even more determination was shown today by the advocates of immediate action. It was also openly suggested that proposition to unseat Kellogg and seat pofford could not be adopted, because there were Democratic Senators who would vote against it. Hill said: "Very well, let them vote against it. The committee had done its duty, and it now remained for the Senate to perform its duty. No matter what the vote might posed of, and in regard to its possible effect upon the Presidential election, he said that it ought not to deter the Senate from disposing of the case." Finally

The caucus this morning was not fully was a sort of compromise and it was consented to in the hope of bringing about a better feeling on the question than now exists, It is the understanding that the final decision shall be made by a full leans and two in Memphis. - A dispatch from Sante Fe, New Mexico, dated the 10th instant says: Inpart of his command, attacked 300 In-
